'Gang of four' celebrate five years

The original "gang of four", who led the buy out of ROCC from Rediffusion Computers in 1984, at a fifth birthday at the Guildhall in London. All four are still on ROCC's board (left to right): Keith Bankes, customer services director, Derek Strath, financial director, Norman Watling, systems design and integration director and Mike Aldrich, chairman.

"ROCC Computers has done very well," says Mr

Aldrich. "In the five years since our independence from Rediffusion, ROCC has gone from strength to strength, and we are well placed for further growth in the 1990s."

In the year to March 31, 1989, ROCC, at Kelvin Way, Crawley, recorded sales of £18.6m and profits of £1.27m. The company, a leading British supplier of data capture and videotex computer systems, has a workforce of nearly 450.

Loyal and true

FIVE customer service personnel from the Crawley computer manufacturer ROCC recently celebrated a combined total of 60 years' service with the firm.

Among them was Andre le Petit — a Crawley based supervisor who has completed ten years with the firm — who lives in Horsham with his wife and two children.

Joining Mr le Petit in celebrating ten years with the firm were engineers Keith Johnson from Edinburgh and Eric White from Bristol. All three received gold pen and pencil sets from director Keith Bankes at a presentation ceremony at the Crawley headquarters.

Commercial manager Ken Beacom, based at Aldershot and Ray Wilkinson, branch customer services manager from Tamworth, were each presented with engraved brass carriage clocks for their 15 years' service with the company.

The men also received long service certificates and their wives were sent flowers courtesy of the company directors.
